Drinking water required: cool or below 50°C hot water from water bottle or RO purifier

Hydrogen Gas vs Hydrogen Water

Inhaling Hydrogen gas enters the body through the lungs, whereas Hydrogen water through the stomach.

Studies suggest that hydrogen inhalation appears to provide better delivery of hydrogen to the circulatory system. And hydrogen water is absorbed through the digestive system.

Breathing in Hydrogen gas allows you to inhale higher milligrams of molecular Hydrogen in a smaller amount of time.

Drinking Hydrogen water with high amounts of dissolved Hydrogen and inhaling Hydrogen at the same time will mean you will get both the intermittent exposure and possible benefits of the extra Hydrogen in your water and by inhalation.

What is Hydrogen Water?

Hydrogen water is normal water (H₂O) with extra molecule hydrogen (H₂) dissolved into it.

Hydrogen water acts a powerful antioxidant that can neutralize harmful free radicals and protect your cells from oxidative stress.

Hydrogen water has many potential health benefits, such as improving hydration, reducing inflammation, enhancing energy, boosting immunity, and preventing chronic diseases etc.

Can I drink it all the time?

Our bodies consisting of cells are naturally designed to live in an alkaline, energised (electrically negative) environment which consists of water.

Hydrogen water is far more hydrating than tap water. It is also non-toxic and safe.

A guideline of daily water consumption for optimal hydration is 2-3+ litres per day.

Typically, initial noticeable changes are increased mental clarity, improved energy and overall detoxing of the body via increased internal system functioning as every cell in the body.
